

FATHERS BLAMED FOR GIRL ERRORS

Girl Should Not Be Under Financial Debt to Men

AGG, May 31.—While speaking to an audience of 300 prominent business men at a local club here today, Helen B. Paulsen, lecturer and psychologist, created a decided sensation when, in discussing the causes for girls going wrong, she emphatically stated that, if parents, and especially fathers, would teach their daughters, from the moment they begin going with young men, to pay their own way, wherever they go, very few girls would go wrong.

"Girls do not want to do wrong things but many of them begin what often results in an unfortunate climax by allowing their boy friends to lead them good-night," said Mrs. Paulsen. "They do it because they feel they owe something for the money the boys have spent on them. If parents were to teach their daughters to pay their own way, the girls would not feel that they must give their perfectly beautiful selves to every man who pays them attention, and everywhere when urged to keep themselves pure and sweet, say in perfect innocence, 'Well, what can we do for the boys for all the money they spend on us?' and the boys say to our girls, 'what do you suppose we are spending all this money on you for anyway?' Since the girl has entered the business world, there is no reason why she should not learn to pay her own way when in high school and college. It will make her a better business woman and certainly a better wife and housekeeper."

Fathers to Blame.
Mrs. Paulsen accused the fathers of young girls of being the chief contributors to their daughters' mistakes. She stated that fathers have a more important home duty in this day than ever before in their lives.

"The woman of yesterday was protected by her father, then married and was protected by her husband. In today's age she did not marry, her father protected her," Mrs. Paulsen said. "The girl of today is in a different environment and surroundings."

"Fathers know the conditions that surround the girls in the store, the office and the factory. They should be the ones to teach them the dangers of the automobile as mothers do not. It is not a square deal to the girls for the fathers not to teach them to know life so well that they can be sweet and pure and still earn their own way. One often hears men criticizing the way girls act and dress in the business world. It would be well for some of them to ask this pertinent question: 'Are your daughters going to dress and act any differently when they go out to work for some one? Then, indeed, the question being asked, if they do, it is going to be because you teach them, they cannot get this intimate knowledge from books nor schools.'

Female Company Costs.
"The twentieth century boy is complaining very bitterly of the girl who and I are causing and the girls are not to blame as much as we are. The boy says, 'There is no home for me.' They say that they go to the home of the girl, knock at the door, she comes to the door and without even asking him in, says, 'Well, where can we go tonight?' 'She has to go to a movie, a theater, have a box of candy and something to eat after it is all over. The young men say they perfectly and made practically gone by the time the evening is over. Do you know that the worthwhile young men, those who are trying to establish themselves, are doing? They are just not going with the girls, they say they cannot afford it, and socially we are all losing out, as well as financially, from the standpoint of home ideals."

Yakima Indians Win Right to Fish in Prosser Dam

After a fight of five years the Indians of the Yakima tribe, Washington, have regained the right to fish for their winter supply of salmon at the famous Prosser dam. Five years ago the state of Washington prohibited the Indians from fishing within 400 feet of the great dam, the law placing a great hardship on the tribe, which found difficulty in catching enough salmon for their needs. The difference dates back more years. In the years when Washington was still a territory the Indians signed a treaty whereby they were granted right to fish at the dam. The Indians therefore claimed that the state law passed five years ago took from them their rights. After a bitter fight against the law the Indians finally secured a "postponement" with Washington senators and members of the state fish and game commission. This conference was held recently in the open near the site of the Prosser dam. The photograph made during the conference shows Chief Menick of the tribe, explaining the Indians' claim to Senator Bishop of Washington. Standing beside the senator is a squaw of the tribe, who acted as interpreter.

GOVERNOR SIGNS BIG FINANCE BILL

No Changes Made in Institutional Measure by the Executive

By Associated Press Staff Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 31.—Governor Robertson today signed the institutional appropriation bill as passed by the special session of the legislature, making no changes in the measure.

The institutional bill originated in the lower house of the legislature, being known as house bill No. 1. The governor also signed a house resolution No. 7 authorizing the state auditor to approve and certify vouchers amounting to $9,862. These were drawn against the non-revenue fund.

Other bills passed by the special session now remain unsigned, these being the departmental appropriation bill, senate bill No. 1.

Mrs. Nott Swoons as Witness Accuses Her

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., May 31.—Mrs. Ethel Hutchins Nott collapsed completely and was led from the courtroom this afternoon when William H. Heeney was telling of a meeting between himself and Edward H. Wade in the Nott home about a year before the murder of George H. Nott, and stated that Mrs. Nott was present when Wade gave him a letter for the purpose of beating up her husband. Mrs. Nott jumped from her seat and cried, "You told me he was never in my house. I can't stand him saying that he was in my house."

She then swooned and was taken from the courtroom by the sheriff. Justice Mahlon ordered a recess until she could recover her composure.
